

ABSTRACT

The present disclosure relates to a system and method for providing personalized customer support. The method comprises receiving information from a customer, evaluating the customer information, identifying customer support
5 information relevant to the customer information, and presenting the relevant customer support information to the customer. In a preferred arrangement, the method comprises automatically generating a personalized web page containing the customer support information particular to the customer and its business.